VPI Head Tells Of Farm Future

Dr. T. J. Horne, director of instruction for the College of Agriculture at V.P.I. was present at the March meeting of Robert E. Lee FFA Chapter to discuss the opportunities in agriculture. "Agriculture is more than farming", stated Dr. Horne as he described the phases of agriculture which includes farming, the marketing of farm products, and the servicing and supply of products to be used in farming. "Forty percent of the working population today is engaged in jobs and careers related to agriculture. The field of agriculture is changing so rapidly today that there is a trend toward even greater opportunities in agriculture," explained Dr. Horne.

"At present there are two job opportunities for every college graduate in agriculture. We need more young men with rural backgrounds to enter the field of agriculture. There are many opportunities and challenges in the field which is basic to our economy." Dr. Horne also stressed the need for applying early for admission to college since the number who want to go exceeds the number that can be taken in by the college.

Farmers Lure City Folks Outdoors For Fun And Profit

When Howard W. Brent, Jr. stepped up to the microphone last week during the five-day outdoor recreation symposium held in Blacksburg, you could easily tell he was a man who loved his work.

Brent operates a campground called "Grey's Point" near Topping, Virginia.

A couple of years ago Grey's Point was merely an attractive patch of woods along the banks of the Rappahannock River. But then Brent moved in with an ax and shovel and converted it into a campground complete with hot showers and a trading post. He opened it to the public last summer.

The public came and looked, and apparently liked what they saw. At any rate, they didn't seem to mind paying Brent $3 a night for camping under his trees.

Brent didn't make a killing last summer; in fact he didn't even show a profit, and doesn't expect to for three years. But he's having the time of his life mingling with campers whom he calls, "high quality people," and getting back to the land.

Then there was Philip M. Mitchell, of Manassas, at the symposium to convert his farm into a shooting preserve, turning his chicken house and garage shed into elaborate club house and dog kennel.

He also has time to fool folk, and when he isn't selling hunting he's training, boarding and beed, dogs, and selling game birds for meat.

Mitchell's partner, whom he calls a "man-and-a-half" is his wife. Last season she dressed some 1,000 birds for hunters and "while she was resting she took care of my five children," Mitchell said.

Also at the symposium was farmer John A. Wade from Alexandria who went down to his farm pond to fish one day, and was told by some stranger to get the heck out of there.

"Do you know who owns this pond," Wade asked the stranger.

"Yeah, some fellow called Wade," the answer came.

Wade then told the stranger he was Wade and to wade the heck out of his pond.

So Wade posted his farm ponds and put a sign along the road saying, "Fishing $1 a day." This little sign brings in $600 to $1,000 a year in extra income.

These are ways landowners and farmers are cultivating that new crop called commercial recreation which was thoroughly discussed by professional agriculturalists and outdoor recreation workers during the symposium.

"Bargain Seed" May Cost More

Know the percentage of Pure Live Seed (PLS) in the seed you buy and make sure you get the most for your money, says the Virginia Department of Agriculture.

The number of Pure Live Seed is the actual number of seed that should germinate and grow under satisfactory field conditions. A so-called "bargain" price seed may have a low PLS percentage and in the long run cost you more money.

Use the information on the seed tag to figure out the price you're paying for seed that are capable of growing.

Here's the formula: multiply the per cent purity by the per cent germination and point off two places.

For example: in a hundred pound bag of seed that shows 90 per cent purity and 80 per cent germination, the percentage of PLS is 90 times 80, or 72 per cent of the lot of seed.

This means that only 72 pounds of seed is acutally Pure Live Seed that can be expected to germinate.

Now to figure the price you're paying for good seed just divide the per cent of PLS into the price per hundred pounds.

By using this formula you may discover that the lowest priced seed will actually cost you more. You will also be better guided to the rate of seeding necessary for a good stand.

Always read the seed tag and learn what you can about the quality of the seed. Take time to figure the percentage of Pure Live Seed in any lot of seed you buy.

Last year in Virginia, 10,611 crippled children and adults received direct care and treatment at one of the 40 centers and services across the state supported by contributions to the Easter Seal Society.

Taxpayers Must List SS Number

The law now requires taxpayers to list their social security numbers on their Federal income tax returns. If both have have income, husband and wife should list their numbers on a joint return. If only one has income, only his number is required.

A. M. Stoepler of the Internal Revenue Service said some returns are being filed in which one or both social security numbers are omitted. Along with checking other entries on the return. taxpayers should double check to make sure that social security numbers are complete and accurate.

If you do not have a number, ask the nearest Internal Revenue office for application Form 32 27.

Training Or Knowledge

EDUCATION in a liberal arts college is viewed by some people as a status symbol. Scientific training now must be developed into a status symbol of science has something to sell — get a job immediately. The value of a technical school begins immediately upon graduation. and good, but that is no argument against liberal arts education. recent conference we heard that a tour that a graduate from a liberal arts college entrance loss of time. We cannot agree.

quite true that a graduate from ical school has been trained for in job. He can become an emof a industrial plant and begins immediately. He will have to union, and he will have to make ogress circumscribed by union He has a security; he becomes a a huge machine. He does not what makes this nation tick, or and the structure of his own ment. He begins to earn, he beproduce, he gets married, buys and a car, and from that time is wedded to his niche in the machine.

ome extent the same is true in of the professions. A far larger age of the graduating legal stud find jobs with the government lawyers are more and more), or a large company, or joins m of several lawyers to do the clerk's work. Other professions have the same experience. Few young men today venture on their own to make their way in an insecure society.

Granted that a graduate from a liberal arts college has less training in specific saleable services. He must go into postgraduate studies to equip himself with specific knowledge which he can sell. But, with a background of a broad base of knowledge, his progress is generally faster than that of the graduate without the background. From the group with the broad educational background generally come the executives. Discipline of the mind in liberal arts education developes a quality of executive potential and stability.

Unless the youngster today is taught in public schools and in colleges the history of mankind, with especial emphasis on United States and Virginia history, we may find a nation of scientists who are going somewhere but don't know where. They are susceptible to all of the false ideas and isms. They become followers not leaders.

We believe that de-emphasis of the humanities and over-emphasis of sciences accounts for must of the present day chaos in sound thinking among our people. We have been sold a bill of goods of security to the detriment of individual initiative, and possibly continued freedom. We flirt with our own slavery when we fail to understand or minimize the principles underlying our own government.

Training does not take the place of knowledge.

Easter Faith

Lesson for March 29, 1964

Easter is a Christian festival. That seems to insult your intelligence, perhaps No offense is intended. But Christians as well as non-Christians need a reminder that apart from the Christian faith there would be no Easter. All sorts of people try to latch on to Easter, so many in fact that it is observed as a holiday season by millions of people who have not the least idea what it really means.

What word goes most often with "Easter" in newspapers and greeting cards Over and over you will see or hear the expression, Easter bonnet, or Easter outfit, or Easter parade. A day to show off, to dress up to the nines and in fact try to outdress everybody else; to make yourself into a fashion model. Sometimes the reason is given that because this is the season when all nature is bright and singing, we should be bright and gay ourselves. But of course this is not it, it isn't even a parody, it is not the Easter idea at all.

It is not a festival to celebrate the returning spring. There is a poem which is quite lovely and yet makes a sad mistake about God. The last lines go:

"Green April is thy very soul.
Thou great Lord God."

But green April is not God's soul. Its beauty was no doubt in God's mind before the world began; but God's soul is not a season of the year.

Faith on the First Easter

Easter does not celebrate even immortality or resurrection, though this is getting "warm." On the first Easter morning in Jerusalem, what disciple of Jesus was happy? Not one, so far as we know. The disciples were anxious, downcast, in dire confusion. In a few hours it was quite different; but when that Sunday morning dawned, although all Jesus' friends so far as we know believed in immortality or resurrection, they were not made happy by that belief. We have two examples in John's story: Mary Magdalene and Thomas the apostle. Each of them began the day in confusion and sorrow. Spring had come, but how empty and mocking spring can be to a grieving heart! Mary on that very day, and Thomas a week afterwards, came to the Easter truth, the great fact: He is risen! That is the right message of the day. Not, we shall live again (although that is included), but He lives. By His resurrection Jesus was proclaimed Lord of death and the place of the dead. (See Rev. 1: 17-19.- Now Mary and Thomas were quite different in their own expressions at their first discovery of the truth. Thomas said, "My Lord and my God!" while Mary Magdalene said only, "Rabboni!" which means "My teacher." Mary had a long way to go before she came to have the faith of Thomas; but Christ does not rebuke her for not being humble enough. If you start with realizing that in Christ we confront one who has battled with death and won — won a victory for us all — and if you keep on thinking what that means, you will be sharing the meaning and message of Eastertide.

Because He Lives . . .

If that had been all it would have been enough. But there is something more. Christians have long believed: Because He lived, I too shall live! The writings of St. Paul are bright with the thought that we share in the risen life of Christ. The Resurrection, which is the reason for Easter, is also, and more importantly, the reason for the Christian's life of joy. Easter is not merely a time to retell wonder stories from the days of old. It is not a time to celebrate the heroic triumph of Jesus of Nazareth alone, it is a time to begin to share in the triumph. Each Christian is set free to say, because this is His Day, it is my Day no less. What does it benefit us that a light brighter than the sun shone in Joseph's garden long ago, if no light is kindled in your own soul.

Pastor Speaks

EVERLASTING

How long is everlasting. Someone has sought to give some indication by saying if you were to take one grain of sand from the shores of the Atlantic, walk across these United States, and deposit it on the shores of the Pacific, repeating this process until all the grains of sand were transported to the Pacific, and then reverse the process, that eternity or everlasing would only have begun. This is another way of saying that human language breaks down when one seeks to describe Everlasting, especially from the time-element.

Yet this is all tied in with Easter. The Message of Easter is related to the Resurrection. The Resurrection is directly related to Jesus being raised from the dead.

In Matthew 28:18, Jesus said to his followers (this was after his own resurrection) "Lo I am with you always . . .' And the great writer of Hebrews stated, 'Jesus Christ, the same yesterday, today and forever "Heb. 13:8 This statement is boldly put forth in the light of the Resurrection of our Lord.

We see, in these two Biblical quotations, two words used to express Everlasting" — always —forever. Really these are saying, "I am with you all the way" from now on into and throughout eternity. Further they would say "There will never be a time from now on when I will not be with you". All these promises are based upon, and assured on one fact — The Resurrection of our Lord Jesus Christ. Everlasting life, existence with Christ from "now on" depends upon our relationship to the Living Christ. It was on the hilltop of Olivet, just before he left his disciples that this claim to be "everlastingly with them"—and us. This has been the basis and keeping alive the Church and the Kingdom of God.

Amputate the resurrection and you have something else than the Christian gospel. The incarnation, the resurrection and ascension are all acts of the eternal God and Our Lord Jesus Christ.

What Jesus was while upon this earth he is eternally. He is the same in forgiveness. What he did while here upon the earth is forgiving people of their sins he is still doing as they trust him as their personal Saviour. As He forgave the woman of Schyzar, so he does today. To the woman who was pelted to death by the angry mob, he said, "thy sins be forgive thee. Go and sin no more."

Wherever his story is told people still experience new life in Christ. Based upon His resurrection, Jesus still gives everlasting life. The missionary in the deserted land, the goodwill worker in the slum, the pastor in the wealthy pulpit, Christ is still in business of giving people everlasting life.

He is also present in all contemporary activity. His beautiful character inspires to noble living; His healing power affect human suffering. Medical science now recognizes the eternity of the spiritual in healing activity. Christ was alive in the gospels, in the early movement of Christianity, and still is in business in contemporary life.

His presence is understandable too. He enters the sick room, He is in the worship at church, He is ever available in today's world. His presence comes through His love and grace. All these are true because of the resurrection. Eternity is working in today's world. He is in any life who has experienced the resurrection through Jesus Christ our Lord.

This Easter season, may he become more real to each as we enter into His House in worship and praise.

President Billy Conner of the Appomattox Elementary P-TA, asked Thursday night for members to try to attend the annual Lynchburg District P-TA meeting Friday, April 10, at Amherst High School. Thirteen delegates may vote from Appomattox. Conner said. He asked parents to notify him if they can attend. Life Members will be honored at the meeting.

The P-TA voted to pay $30.00 a year into a scholarship fund set up by the Appomattox Education Association. Scholarship will amount to $400, Conner said.

Mrs. Ella Gordon's room won the $3.00 attendance prize.

Director of Instruction, C. Bruce Chandler, announced that pre - school registration would take place soon on a school day at 3:30 p.m. instead of the previous custom of scheduling a full day of activity for children planning to enter school next year. Any mail box then becomes a teller's window. The mail man does most of the work. Ask for our handy envelopes for banking by mail.
